Audit of COVID-19 related death data in the ACT

- ACT Health undertook a review of COVID-19 related deaths in the ACT. It compared all COVID-19 deaths reported to the ACT Births Deaths and Marriages Registry (BDM) with COVID-19 cases reported to ACT Health over the course of the pandemic (since March 2020).
- The audit identified 61 COVID-19 deaths where the certifying doctor listed COVID-19 on the person's death certificate but had not been reported to ACT Health.
- As of 17 February 2023, with the inclusion of the 61 COVID-19 deaths plus the 6 deaths to be reported this week, the ACT's total lives lost figure is 224 (since March 2020 until the end of the current reporting period).
- A COVID-19-related death is defined as a death in a confirmed or probable COVID-19 case where the certifying doctor has listed COVID-19 on the person's death certificate.
- Up to the end of 2022, COVID-19-related deaths were reported to ACT Health from a number of sources, including from public and private hospitals, from Residential Aged Care Facilities (RACFs), and from the ACT Coroner's Court.
- The following provides a summary of the additional deaths:
  - All 61 deaths occurred in 2022.
  - The highest number of deaths were in the months of June and July (12 deaths in each month respectively) which coincided with a peak in COVID-19 cases reported to ACT Health.
  - The age range was from 68 to 102 years (median age 86 years), and 60% were male.
  - 59% (36/61) of the deaths occurred at Residential Aged Care Facilities (RACFs), 18% (11/61) died at home, 16% (10/61) in ACT Public Hospitals and 7% (4/61) at a Palliative Care Facility.
  - None of the deceased cases identified as Aboriginal and or Torres Strait Islander.
  - Of the 36 unreported deaths in residents of RACFs, 75% (27/36) of these have been linked to COVID-19 outbreaks that occurred in 2022 across 21 facilities.
- The resource intensive and manual nature of the reporting process is the likely main reason for deaths being under-reported, with hospitals and RACFs having to identify potential COVID-19-related deaths and manage death certificates to determine if the death is reportable.
- To ensure COVID-19-related death numbers are as accurate as possible into the future, BDM data will be used as the primary source of COVID-19-related deaths in the ACT.
